

I tried – and when I lifted up my eyes, could see
The vision which had made you free.
We walk together now – a pleasant band
Which waits for me, if I should fill my hand
With the trembling fingers of one, whose spirit must also break – or bend
And teach him softly, what it means to have–and be–a friend.
Just for today
I will let others see
What each of you has done for me.

I tried – and when I lifted up my eyes, could see
The vision which had made you free.
We walk together now – a pleasant band
Which waits for me, if I should fill my hand
With the trembling fingers of one, whose spirit must also
break – or bend
And teach him softly, what it means to have–and be–a friend.
Just for today
I will let others see
What each of you has done for me.

I tried – and when I lifted up my eyes, could see
The vision which had made you free.
We walk together now – a pleasant band
Which waits for me, if I should fill my hand
With the trembling fingers of one, whose spirit must also
break – or bend
And teach him softly, what it means to have–and be–a friend.
Just for today
I will let others see
What each of you has done for me.

I tried – and when I lifted up my eyes, could see
The vision which had made you free.
We walk together now – a pleasant band
Which waits for me, if I should fill my hand
With the trembling fingers of one, whose spirit must also
break – or bend
And teach him softly, what it means to have–and be–a friend.
Just for today
I will let others see
What each of you has done for me.

I tried – and when I lifted up my eyes, could see
The vision which had made you free.
We walk together now – a pleasant band
Which waits for me, if I should fill my hand
With the trembling fingers of one, whose spirit must also
break – or bend
And teach him softly, what it means to have–and be–a friend.
Just for today
I will let others see
What each of you has done for me.